

2025 Baskett Mosse Award for Faculty Development

Applications are due March 1, 2025.

Call for Applications

The Baskett Mosse Award for Faculty Development recognizes an outstanding young or midcareer faculty member in journalism or mass communication. Its recipient is awarded a $1,000 stipend to be used toward work on a development or enrichment activity in any appropriate aspect of teaching, research or public service.

The proposed activity should be a true enrichment-oriented activity, not just to assist in normal work or for attendance at a conference.

Young or mid-career faculty members teaching in ACEJMC-accredited journalism programs are eligible to apply. Applicants must have been AEJMC members for at least the past two years.

Applicants must submit the following:

- a typed, double-spaced description of the activity toward which the stipend will be applied. The description should not exceed 2 pages. The activity may be new or ongoing.
- a copy of the applicant's curriculum vita.
- a letter of recommendation for the applicant's activity from the administrative head of the journalism program. Letter should be no more than 2 pages.

No more than one application from the same program will be accepted the same year. If more than one application from the same program is submitted, the program's administrative head must rule on which application will move forward for consideration.

AEJMC reserves the right not to present the award. Winners of previous Baskett Mosse Awards may not enter the competition again.

For questions, contact Lillian Coleman, AEJMC project director, at lillian@aejmc.org.

All entries should be submitted by email in one PDF file by 5 p.m. (Eastern time) on March 1 to lillian@aejmc.org. Type "Baskett Mosse Award" in the email subject line.
